Communications Technologies, JT&T merge

BURTON — Communications Technologies, Inc., an industry leader in unified communications, has merged with JT&T Communications. Communications Technologies currently provides business communications technology to small to mid-sized companies throughout the Michigan marketplace.

The merger will bring greater levels of service and an expanded offering of products and services to JT&T's existing customers. JT&T will now operate under the Communications Technologies name and all technical staff will become members of the Communications Technologies team.

"It was our objective to partner with an experienced technology organization with a strong reputation and a desire to improve business technology options for the companies they serve," said Jeff Allen, president of Communications Technologies. "By combining the strengths of the two organizations, customers will benefit from a broader array of products and services, including advanced VoIP solutions, IT networking, IT support, consultation and training."

JT&T's customers will receive a number of unique advantages not previously available. Communications Technologies' Partner Plans are a prime example. "Our Partner Plans allow us to truly act as our client's business communications partner," said Allen. "These plans will provide JT&T customers with a level of service and support that exceeds their expectations. Not only do these plans provide coverage for all service and equipment needs for a fixed cost, but they include priority queuing and scheduling, reduced labor rates, preventative maintenance programs and guarantees for response times and available parts. These unique partner plans are unmatched by any other vendor in our region and we're excited to offer them to JT&T's customers."

Additionally, Communication Technologies offers customers the Current Technology Assurance Plan (CTAP), an innovative program that ensures the telecom and information systems of small to mid-sized companies remain current and incorporate the latest in value added solutions.

"We believe technology should provide companies with a competitive advantage and improved operating efficiencies that will positively impact their bottom line. Through our abundance of managed services offerings and support plans designed to lower the total cost of service and ownership, we will help JT&T's customers achieve their business objectives," said Allen.

Communications Technologies, Inc. (CTI) is an independently, locally owned voice and data communications company serving Michigan businesses for more than 20 years. CTI is a one-source solution for ordering dial tone and highspeed Internet, providing voice and data cabling, and installation and support of business telephone systems and computer networks.

CTI's goal is to add value, differentiate its services, and deliver strategic technologies with integrity and innovation resulting in the highest level of customer profitability, satisfaction and competition advantage. For more information about CTI please call 800-860-6910 or visit www.cti4u.com. — G.G.

Common cold or flu bug?

Q: What is the difference between a cold and the flu?
A: Both cold and flu are illnesses of the respiratory tract. Flu is caused by the influenza virus, while more than 200 different viruses can cause the common cold. The symptoms of cold and flu are similar enough to cause confusion, especially during winter and early spring when both are common. However, flu is more than just a bad cold. It is a serious contagious disease that can lead to hospitalization and even death. Groups at high risk for developing flu-related complications include pregnant women, young children, the elderly, and people with chronic health conditions such as asthma, heart disease and diabetes.

Q: How can I best prevent flu?
A: Annual vaccination is usually advised for a cold, while the use of antiviral drugs may be appropriate for flu. In particular, high-risk groups may benefit from taking antiviral medication within 48 hours of symptom onset to reduce the length and severity of the illness.

Q: When should I see the doctor?
A: Most healthy people will recover from the cold on their own. Flu symptoms typically last from 5-7 days, a cold will clear up within 7-12 days. People at high risk of complications should consult with a physician. Also see a doctor if any of the following occur:
• Symptoms worsen or return
• Fever lasts longer than three days
• Wheezing or difficulty breathing
• Severe or persistent vomiting

Q: What steps can I take to prevent a cold?
A: Hand-washing is one of the most effective ways to prevent the spread of infection and illness—from the common cold to the flu. Wash with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, scrubbing the backs of your hands, in between fingers and under fingernails. Dry with a clean towel.
